

Annual Report 2018

Interest Group on Peace and Security

Convenors: Professor Theodore Christakis (University Grenoble Alpes/Institut Universitaire de France)

Dr Paulina Starski (Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law, Germany)

Professor Nicholas Tsagourias (University of Sheffield, UK)

The Interest Group on Peace and Security (IGPS) is one of the largest ESIL groups with around 440 members. After the great success of our Agora on 'Solidarity and the promotion of peace and security' during the 13th Annual ESIL Conference in Naples we are planning two major events for the year 2018/2019.

The first will be an event during the ESIL Research Forum in Göttingen (on the 3 April 2019) on the topic of 'The rule of law in cyberspace'. In our call for papers we will invite submissions addressing issues such as the place and role of law in cyberspace, jurisdiction, national/international enforcement as well as human rights. The call for papers will be online by the end of November 2018.

Furthermore, we will submit a proposal for an AGORA during ESIL's annual conference in Athens in 2019 ('Sovereignty: A Concept in a State of Flux?'). Our call for papers will be published by January 2019.

More information about these events will be available soon.

Beyond that, we are in the final stages of creating our new website. It shall serve as a convenient information and communication platform for its members.
