2020

CALL FOR PAPERS:

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, agreed by all States Members of the United Nations, sets out an ambitious framework of universal and indivisible goals (SDGs) and targets to address a range of global societal challenges. Biodiversity and ecosystems feature prominently across many of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and associated targets. They contribute directly to human well-being and development priorities. Biodiversity is at the centre of many economic activities, particularly those related to crop and livestock agriculture, forestry, and fisheries. Globally, nearly half of the human population is directly dependent on natural resources for its livelihood, and many of the most vulnerable people depend directly on biodiversity to fulfil their daily subsistence needs. The Strategic Plan for Biodiversity 2011-2020 and its Aichi Biodiversity Targets adopted under the Convention on Biological Diversity 1992 have been recognized as setting the global framework for priority actions on biodiversity. The 2030 Agenda is consistent with other existing international commitments, including the Strategic Plan for Biodiversity. The SDGs and the Strategic Plan are mutually supportive and reinforcing, and therefore the implementation of one contributes to the achievement of the other.

The United Nations has declared 2020 as the International Year of Plant Health. The year is a once in a lifetime opportunity to raise global

INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF PLANT HEALTH
2020

IN DECEMBER 2018, THE UN GENERAL ASSEMBLY ADOPTED THE RESOLUTION A/RES/73/252 DECLARING 2020 AS THE INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF PLANT HEALTH (IYPH). IN OCTOBER 2019 THE XVIII BLISCHENKO CONGRESS WAS INCLUDED IN THE INTERNATIONAL YEAR OF PLANT HEALTH OFFICIAL EVENTS LIST.

awareness on how protecting plant health can help end hunger, reduce poverty, protect the environment, and boost economic development.

Plants are the source of the air we breathe and most of the food we eat, yet we often don't think about keeping them healthy. This can have devastating results. FAO estimates that up to 40% of food crops are lost due to plant pests and diseases annually. This leaves millions of people without enough food to eat and seriously damages agriculture - the primary source of income for rural poor communities.

"Plants provide the core basis for life on Earth and they are the single most important pillar of human nutrition. But healthy plants are not something that we can take for granted" said FAO Director-General

Qu Dongyu who launched the Year on the sidelines of the UN agency's Council meeting.

Plant health is increasingly under threat. Climate change, and human activities, have altered ecosystems, reducing biodiversity and creating new niches where pests can thrive. At the same time, international travel and trade has tripled in volume in the last decade and can quickly spread pests and diseases around the world causing great damage to native plants and the environment.

Protecting plants from pests and diseases is far more cost effective than dealing with full-blown plant health emergencies. Plant pests and diseases are often impossible to eradicate once they have established themselves and managing them is time consuming and expensive. Prevention is critical to avoiding the devastating impact of pests and diseases on agriculture, livelihoods and food security and many of us have a role to play in that process.
